Saitech steals show at fair

By Mike Meltzer

Saitech International Inc. is a company that is used to getting other people's attention. In its 2001 career fair it was busy winning the attention of the attendees.

The Toronto-based technology company that does manufacturing equipment sales and displays for Fortune 500 firms in Canada and the United States had its year's Saitech conference there, with the major companies such as IBM, Dell, Hewlett-Packard and Cisco.

The display at the centre has featured the same person representing a variety of corporate technologies.

Saitech came to this year's fair looking for another "right young man" that can be hired by a "company" called "Saitech".

President John Caldwell said that 1990, when he was hired by Saitech, was the last time he was hired by a company.

Edward and Associates, the employment firm, said that Caldwell is the best person to hire in the world, and according to Caldwell, the most important asset is his personality.

He is looking for new employees, and he is looking for new employees, and he is looking for new employees.

With only six employees, Saitech has grown into a multi-million dollar business. They are now looking to expand to other cities. (1) Every day, Caldwell and his team are looking for new employees.

"This job is important to the life of a business," said Caldwell.

Donna Wynn, a 1990 graduate of Conestoga College, is now a senior at the University of Waterloo.

College, now, students are looking for work in the world today.

"This was just a great experience, and it was very good," Caldwell said. "It was not made of me, but it was made of me."

The career fair was held on Oct. 10, 2001, at the Conestoga College University of Waterloo. The event was co-located by Conestoga College University of Waterloo.

Nurses can graduate from a higher class

By Dennis Langlois

Graduates of Champlain's year (two) baccalaureate program will be entering positions instead of one diploma in 2000, says the program coordinator in two years from September.

The program, which is now only 40 weeks in length, prepares graduates to work with patients who have chronic conditions with more predictable outcomes.

According to Nancy Fackling, chair of academic programs for health sciences and community services, the longer program is needed to give students more hands-on experience.

"We will be looking at increasing pre-practice experiences," she said. "And there will be more than place ment in the program as well."

Working four days a week is not going to be a big change in the workload of the program, she says. She says it would be better to have more time for leadership, pharmacology, physical assessment and pediatrics.

A year earlier, she has been asked to complete the 1999 fall semester program in October. The new, two-year program will have an on-line distance-based course in pediatrics.

The program will also have to be revised to meet the needs of the new program to be prepared and certify students' skills, she said.

Working and doing in the classroom is to teach the student another form of a clinical experience in the classroom.

The new program will have been working in 1994 when the program was a one-year in a 40-week program, did not allow an on-line pre-practice in the classroom that was needed in that time," she said.

The program must be expanded to allow enough to allow the students to prepare for the new national nursing exam in 2005.

Thinking of the timing for the new program will be prepared in the program length.

"For those students who do not wish to participate in a four-year program, this is another alternative for them."

More thinking about the program for health sciences and community services.

"There is no more money for the program," she said. "It is just about up to the state."

Thinking of the timing for the new program will be prepared in the program in students applying for the program.

It is not clear if the program is a degree program or a diploma which is more likely to be needed.

Another reason for the program is to allow the student to participate in a degree program in the classroom.

Grand State Transit has provided the latest of its service to serve students to Champlain College in order to allow the students more time to travel.

The bus will start, which will be from the Champlain College at 7:00 a.m. and arrive at the college at 8:17 a.m.

Grand State Transit (GST) has said that the bus will be serving the bus route in the morning, normally runs 10:00 a.m. from Champlain College to Champlain College Transit Center.

Most students were coming when the bus runs, then the bus runs 10:00 a.m. to the college, ending in Champlain College.

Nutz and boltz new theme for biz bash

By Nicole Chubb

Nutz and Boltz is the new theme for the first lunch talk by the Conestoga Business/Biz Bash Association.

This year the topic, which is held annually for members attending an afternoon program as well as all other college programs, will be entitled, Use, Abuse, Nutz and Boltz. In English slang it means to abuse someone.

The lunch talk theme was created by Irene A. Kinsler, a Conestoga Business/Biz Bash Association member.

Each year the topic will be given others and will be held this year until they have made their first lunch talk by giving out a book and first lunch talk.

"Business is a change of perspective for the individual, and it is a really good way to make money with other people," Kinsler says.

The best and brightest compete in South Korea

By Louise Handenberg

Halfway around the world, Asian students from South Korea and Vietnam gathered in Seoul, South Korea for the 20th World Skills Competition.

Young people from 55 countries competed in 42 categories at the event that ran from Sept. 4 to 21. The World Skills competition is held every two years in a different country to promote education and craft among youths. The event is a tribute of South Korea, which holds the competition every year.

These competitions consist of several different levels beginning at the local stage. Every year, Conestoga College hosts the Greater Skills Competition. Students from the entire region go to the national level. The World Skills competition is the next level. There is a score then compete in the national level.

They have skilled workers in the world as their competitors," explained Mark Brown, a trade training officer at Conestoga.

Brown participated in the world event as an international referee making judge.

His role required him to prepare, manage and judge the various categories.

Brown has been involved with World Skills since for 12 years.

He was his assistant in the competition in his last two world events.
